Property Description

Driving through the Costa Rican jungle in Ojochal, not far off the main highway, it seems natural to find such a unique and artistic property like this. Standing high off the jungle floor these very solid well build tree house homes sit high in the jungle canopy like a village from an old world novel. This is one of those properties you have to see to believe. 14 homes, several finished and the rest in varying degrees of being finished make up a the village that can be purchased, in whole with land and all, at a significant lower cost than if you purchased the units individually. With massive well-built concrete and steel columns going deep into the earth, there has been a significant amount of investment already made in this project. Perfect for an artist's retreat or self-sustaining eco village this is a great investment opportunity for the individual who wants to finish a great project.
