Property Description

2012 Rene Frank Award Winner for its Architecture and Design. This dashing, modern house has a unique floor plan designed, so to speak, like a peacock tail opening up in full splendor. As you walk into the house, past the vestibule, different “feathers” shoot out from the center in different directions, that is, left and right and towards the back, becoming a bedroom, a kitchen, a living room. There is a sense of continuity and interconnectivity. Water, light, and stone mix in stunning surfaces and spaces. There are 3000 m2 of stone alone; several water mirrors, one of them being the swimming pool, and abundant light, both natural and Led illumination. The property has 2454 m2 and 802 m2 of construction. The house is well ventilated, at the same time that security has been well thought out. Starting with the elegant façades, handsome stone slabs stand out as main architectural features all around the house.
