Property Description

This home was built with one thing in mind: maximize all rooms to view the ocean and sunset, without any other room impeding the view. Look down and across the jungle valley to the crashing waves upon black sand beaches. The combination of the valley, ocean and mountain views, with the ever-changing clouds and sunsets, will impress you every day and evening. The jungle is filled with life from all directions. The morning awakens you with the roar of howler monkeys. As the sun peeks over the mountain, the jungle comes alive. Scarlet Macaws and birds of all color and size take flight, soaring right in front of you as you sip your morning coffee on the large screened terrace which extends the full length of the house. It is a spectacular way to start the day. This house can be your home on the Southern Pacific Coast of Costa Rica. The house is situated at 2,000 feet above sea level, just 10 minutes up from the highway and 20 minutes to shopping and the local regional airport in Palmar.
